ACTION OF THE HOUSE YESTERDAY ON CANADIAN RECIPROCITY TREATY WILL NOT BE DUPLICATED.

SERIOUS TROUBLE EXPECTED

Enemies of the Measure to Try Filibuster Tactics to Keep It From Being Passed.

Washington, Feb. 15.—After having slipped through the House with loud opposition, the Canadian reciprocity bill, according to leaders today, is likely to run against an insurmountable barrier in the senate.

Strong Opposition.

They declare it is not certain so large a majority of senate democrats will support the measure as in the House. Senator Cummins (Rep., Iowa) taken as representing the progressive wing, has vowed his aggressive opposition.

No Gag Rule.

The gag rule, such as fastened the vote in the House, is not possible in the senate and the reciprocity leaders fear opponents may filibuster.

Up to Senate.

The bill passed by the House by a vote of 221 to 92, providing for reciprocity with Canada, was received today by the senate and referred to the committee and all papers relating to that subject.

Increased Salary.

On motion of Rep. Mann of Illinois the House this afternoon increased the salary of Chief Justice of the United States from $13,000 to $15,000.

Signed by Taft.

The bill giving approval of congress to the holding of the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco was today signed by President Taft with a pen made of California gold.

TO "FILIBUSTER" BILL TO DEATH IS PRESENT PLAN

Publishers Start Campaign Against the Increase of the Postal Rates On Magazines Today.

Washington, Feb. 15.—One of the most acrimonious fights ever seen in congress developed today over the Taft-Hitchcock plan to increase the postal rates on magazines when the publishers received promises from enough progressive republicans and democratic senators to secure a plan to filibuster for the measure. This plan "to talk the bill to death" means the holding up of the whole postoffice appropriations bill and that means an extra session.

MAKING EFFORTS TO SECURE SETTLEMENT OF TRADE DISPUTES

Ambassador Bernstorff Conducting Negotiations With State Department Regarding German Potash Trade.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—It is learned here that Ambassador Bernstorff is conducting negotiations with the state department at Washington looking to the adjustment of the potash trade dispute on the basis of a note recently presented to Secretary Knox by the German government. This note set forth the German attitude, suggesting that the question of whether the German producers or the American buyers should pay the surtax imposed by the recently enacted mining law, might be a matter for arbitration, and that in the event it was established by the German government, the Americans should properly feel upon the Americans the export price should be mutually agreed upon by the two governments.

FOURTEEN HUNDRED BILLS INTRODUCED

Total Number of Measures Is Two Hundred Under That for Session of 1909—Much Work to Be Done.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 15.—Nearly 1,400 bills—200 under the total for the session of 1909—constitute the results of the "first session" of the 1911 legislative session, the time for the introduction of new bills having closed last night. Of these, a little over 405 actually and 181 senate bills had been printed up to today; nearly 400 were received yesterday and to midnight last night in the assembly and 65 in the senate. The revision clerks of both houses, especially the assembly, are literally swamped with measures that must be read over and corrected for various kinds of errors before they can be formally introduced and referred to the proper committees.

Under the new rule adopted in the assembly, members desiring to file new bills hereafter may file them with the committee on legislative procedure, of which the speaker is ex-officio chairman, and if that body decides that they are of sufficient importance, they will be passed on to the committees. The senate, however, so far has refused to concur in this rule, and probably will decide to do as it pleases in individual cases. It will take the rest of the week for the revision clerks to get through the piles before them, so the chief clerks will occupy much of each day's session with the monotonous reading of titles, and the presiding officers will drone out the reference to committees.

The next calendar day is Thursday, so that little was expected to occur today beyond the reference of bills.

A golden pig was placed inside of the ball, composed of springs bent in circles, and after being placed in a model aeroplane 12 feet high, was hurled from a roof eighty feet high. The pig was badly shaken up but not otherwise injured. A bigger ball is being made for a revolution machine for tests soon. It is not likely that anyone will volunteer to fall in it and a hog will be substituted.

PENSION SYSTEM IS WORKING WELL

Striking Reduction in Pauperism in England Shown Since System Was Adopted Two Years Ago.

London, Feb. 15.—Figures just made public show there has been in London a striking decrease in pauperism since the adoption of the old-age pension system two years ago.

Paupers are divided into two classes—"indoor" (inmates of infirmaries) and "outdoor." Until recently a person who had ever had "indoor" relief was not entitled to the old age pension. This law has been changed, with the result that several hundred infirmaries inmates have left the institutions and are now drawing pensions.

The decrease in pauperism has been chiefly in the "outdoor" class. In 1908 17,120 Londoners received "outdoor" relief; in 1910 only 32,195—a falling off of 14,225.

In 1908, in London, 27 persons out of every 1,000 received relief; in 1910 there were only 23.1 per 1,000.

DEPOSIT GUARANTY BILL IS OPPOSED

By Bankers Throughout the State Who Are Saving Energy for Committee Meetings and Debates.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 15.—In connection with the Owen and Husting bills for the guaranty of bank deposits, which are so bitterly opposed by the bankers of the state, it has been learned that the proponents of the measures and others interested in the passage of this kind of legislation have been saving their ammunition for regular committee hearings and for debates on the floor. Most of this they are keeping to themselves, but it is said that one of the principal arguments in favor of the bills will be the claim that the average annual dividend of all the state banks during the year 1910 was between 17 and 18 per cent, while the rate in several cities is declared to have reached in individual cases as high as 30 per cent. During the hearings held by the special committee on banking of the last legislature, it was impossible to get the correct figure from the commissioner of banking without taking that official into court, as the law compels him to hold all such information in confidence. The committee did not think it necessary to do so, but arrived at a conclusion as to the average profit of bank stockholders by a different method.

TAFT SURPRISED AT CLARK'S STATEMENT AS TO ANNEXATION

Hopes the World at Large Will Understand Administration's Attitude.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 15.—President Taft today, to some of his callers, expressed astonishment that Representative Clark should have injected into the discussion in the House yesterday any thought about the annexation of Canada.

While the House is said to regard Clark's remarks as most unfortunate and the President has made it known he would like to have it understood throughout the world that his administration had no thought whatever of annexation when the reciprocity agreement was arranged.

The President, it is said, is hopeful that the people of this country and Canada, and Great Britain will look upon Clark's speech merely as the expression of an individual and not that of any party in this country.

SANBORN MAKES STRONG PROTEST

OBJECTS TO LEGISLATURE ASKING CONGRESS TO SUPPORT ANY MEASURE.

THE WATER POWER HEARINGS

Will Take Several Days To Complete It—Other Matters Taken Up.

Madison, Feb. 15.—Senator Sanborn today voiced a vigorous protest against the adoption of a resolution by the senate requesting Wisconsin members of Congress to vote for or against any pending legislation.

The protest was occasioned following a motion by Senator Linsley asking a suspension of rules and the adoption of a resolution requesting Wisconsin members of the United States Senate to vote for the Salloway bill. The resolution was laid over.

No little interest centers in the opening of hearings this afternoon by the legislative committee on waterways on the various bills now introduced in the legislature providing for taxation of dams and waterways and for conservation of water available for power. The hearing will likely last several days.

Assemblyman Olin today introduced a bill abolishing the present state board of control and creating a board of eleven members, one from each congressional district, to be elected by the people instead of appointed by the governor.

Senator Gaylord of Milwaukee, introduced in the Senate today, a bill, which, if enacted into law, will permit the immediate dismissal of Chief Justice and the present fire and police regime so admittedly unsatisfactory to the Social Democratic city government.

The bill abolishes the board of fire and police commissioners in cities of the first class and provides for appointment of chiefs of police and fire department under laws or ordinances of the city.

With the ban put on the introduction of new business into the legislature at 12 o'clock last night, many belated legislators today introduced their measures through the medium of the revision committee. All bills introduced today were placed in the hands of this committee before midnight and were read back into the two houses today.

The appointment of John A. Scholtz as state fish and game warden, was today confirmed in the senate by an unanimous vote.

LONDON PAPERS ARE GREATLY EXERCISED

Would Stock Reciprocity Treaty Between United States and Canada If Possible.

London, Feb. 15.—Following the speech of speaker elect Clark in the house late yesterday in which he predicted the ultimate annexation of Canada if President Taft's reciprocity treaty is ratified the English Press is thoroughly aroused and pleads for measures to forestall reciprocity if in common.

The American-Canadian reciprocity agreement came to the fore in the Commons again today. The government was questioned regarding the statement attributed to Henry Bourassa, the Nationalist leader in the legislature in Quebec, to the effect the home government had encouraged Canada to conclude the reciprocity trade understanding with the United States. Premier Asquith replied: "The statement is entirely without foundation in fact." The premier also denied that Ambassador Bryce had been engaged actively in helping bring about the agreement.

This would be the outcome, Home Rule.

During the preliminary home rule debate in the Commons today Premier Asquith reiterated his declaration that the government's first task after the "veto bill" was disposed of would be to carry out the policy of full self-government for Ireland.

POULTRY MEN ELECT OFFICERS FOR YEAR

At a Meeting of the Janesville Association Held Last Night Officers and Directors Were Elected.
At a meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Wisconsin Poultry and Poultry Stock association held last night, directors and officers for the following year were elected. The following were the directors chosen: William McVear, W. H. Ashcraft, Edward Amerpohl, J. D. King, F. H. Kopp, W. E. Carle, Clarence Lewington, O. S. Morse, and F. H. Green. Directly following their election, the directors retired and elected officers, which are as follows: William McVear, president; W. H. Ashcraft, vice-president; F. H. Green, secretary; and Edward Amerpohl, treasurer.
A spirit of optimism prevailed in the meeting and the members feel that they have had a very successful year and have bright prospects for a better one to come. No mention of any combination with the Beloit association for next year's show and if such a thing had been brought up it would undoubtedly have been shelved as the local association does not feel the need of any such arrangement.
An effort is being made by the association to obtain aid from the state in financing their shows. There is a fund in the state for this purpose and a bill has been introduced by Assemblyman Fisher to draw on this for the southern Wisconsin people. J. D. King and F. H. Green were in Madison last week in behalf of this appropriation and it is thought that it will go through. Preparations have already been started to make the show next year the biggest ever with large cash prizes.

WHAT DID NOT HAPPEN IN THE TELEPHONE SITUATION

SOME months ago the president of the National Independent Telephone Association received a communication from the head officials of the Bell Telephone Company in New York through the great banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., who are financial agents for the Bell Company, stating that they would like to meet the representative men in the Independent Telephone movement with a view to arriving at some agreement by which the ruinous competition (as they called it) in the telephone business could be stopped.

The conference was held at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago last December. There were present Mr. Vail, Pres. of the Bell Telephone Co.; Mr. Davison of the firm of J. J. Morgan & Co.; Mr. Stevens of New York, attorney for the Bell Telephone Co., and some 40 gentlemen representing the larger independent telephone interests throughout the United States. Mr. Vail stated that they would like to bring about a merger of all the telephone interests in the United States, and if such a merger could be made, he believed in capitalizing the losses which had been sustained through competition during the past 15 years. When asked what he considered the losses had been, he stated that it was a difficult question to answer, but that it ran into the hundreds of millions of dollars. Mr. Davison representing the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., said that if such a merger could be brought about that his firm stood ready to guarantee to pay cash to any independent stockholder who preferred it to exchanging his stock for stock in the merged company. After that the representatives of the Bell Telephone Company were asked to withdraw from the room and a discussion followed. During this discussion one of the representatives from Wisconsin cited the merger of the Wisconsin Bell Telephone Co. and the Beloit Telephone Company in the city of Beloit, Wis., which took place a few years ago and which eventually resulted in the purchase of all the independent stock in the merged company, by the Bell Company, some of it as low as 65c on the dollar. Since the merger, telephone rates in Beloit have nearly doubled and they have lost about half of the subscribers.

Later at the conference the question was put to Mr. Davison, "What assurance have the independent interests that the promises of the Bell Telephone Company would be fulfilled?" Mr. Davison's reply was to this effect: "The Bell Telephone company with its $700,000,000.00 capitalization was up against it, and that it was to either put a stop to the ruinous competition, or it was hard to tell what the consequences would be."

Nothing definite could be arrived at at this conference for the reason that those present were merely representing their personal interests, but the whole matter was thrashed out at the convention of the National Independent Telephone Association, held in Chicago last week and the resolutions printed herewith were unanimously adopted.

We want the people of Southern Wisconsin to know that the Independent Telephone Movement today has more telephones in operation than the trust.

That the capitalization of the independents will total about $400,000,000.00;
That the Rock County Telephone Company will remain independent;
That it gives double the service for the same money and that you can have a telephone in your home for $1.00 per month. You can talk over nearly 2500 phones in the city of Janesville at less than one-half the cost to talk with only 300 under monopoly conditions of some years ago.

How Our Subscribers Are Approached

After the big deal fell through, they still try to make people believe it, with "bosh" like this:—

A solicitor is sent out to see all prospects. His story drools out as follows:

"Now, ———, you've always been a friend of mine and I am going to give you a tip, as a friend. We are going to take over the Rock County Company as soon as we get into our new building, and there won't be room enough on our board for all of their subscribers, so some people will be without a telephone. You want your telephone, and to be sure that you won't be one of those that are cut off, you better give me your order now and then you will be sure of having it."

He then shifted his quid of tobacco to the other side, put his cane under his arm and waited expectantly.

He didn't get the order, and after drooling out some more "dope" like the above, lit his pipe, hunched his back and went out into the cold.

THEATER

Old-fashioned comedy—the kind made known by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, but brought down to date, and set in a familiar environment, is offered by Grace George in her new play "Sauce for the Goose," which is announced for this evening. The author has borrowed nothing of stagecraft from the old writers of comedy, but the scintillating wit, the vivid flashes of unexpected repartee and the keen satire upon the weakness of human nature utilized so successfully by the playwrights of another period, are, it is declared, revived in "Sauce for the Goose" in a way that proves markedly symbolic play "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," which ran for twelve months in London, England, and is now packing the Garrick Theatre, Chicago, to the utmost at each performance. The late King Edward witnessed it twice in one week, although pressed by state affairs, and he sent his entire family, including the present King and Queen of England, President Taft and his family, and enjoyed it greatly. Sir Edward Russell, famous English Educational Commissioner, wrote a treatise on it, and devoted a column of an editorial to it in the Liverpool Daily Post. Both the a revolution. And it is in just such a play that the remarkable and undebatable words of Miss George are shown in their most alluring aspects. Since the retirement of Ada Rehan, there has been no one to contest with Miss George the position of America's leading comedienne. As Kitty Constance, in the new comedy, who has a part with which she is thoroughly in sympathy and the opinion is expressed that she has added another remarkable example of character portraiture to her notable stage creations.

"Sauce for the Goose" exposes the weaknesses of husbands who neglect their wives, makes merry at the expense of the inconstancies of those who preach the "open door" in social life, takes a rap at female suffrage, and, in its final appeal, stands for domestic faith and happiness.

Clinton, Feb. 15.—The fire alarm bell rang yesterday afternoon about one o'clock and awoke our village from its winter's slumber. The fire company, as usual, responded in remarkably short time

WOULD PUT STOP TO DYEING OF FLOWERS
Horticulturist Has Protested Against Coloring of Flowers To Match Gowns of French Ladies.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The president of the National Federation of Horticultural syndicates has asked the minister of agriculture to put a stop to the practice of dyeing flowers, as he objects, for aesthetic reasons, to green roses, even though they match the dress of the woman wearing them.
Fashionable Parisiennes have discovered that, by placing the stalk of a cut flower in a chemical solution, the petals can be dyed. Some of the women go so far as to dye flowers to match their eyes. Aniline dyes are much used.

It is understood that the minister of agriculture, himself an enthusiastic amateur horticulturist, has promised to use his arbitrary powers to make green roses and red violet punishable offenses.

INDICT 20 IN VOTE FRAUDS

Menard County, Ill., Takes Action Against Corruption at Polls—Danville Prosecutor Arrested.

Petersburg, Ill., Feb. 15.—Twenty voters of Menard county, several of them residents of Petersburg, were indicted by the Menard county grand jury on charges of selling their votes in the election last fall. Among the indicted men are Frank Brahm, Thomas Scantlin, Christopher Griffin, James Ferguson, and Thomas Rogers. None of the other names has been made public.

Danville, Ill., Feb. 15.—Verdell county's grand jury abruptly dispensed with the services of State's Attorney John H. Lewman in the vote fraud inquiry. Following a clash between the prosecutor and Foreman Isaac Wood, yard of the grand jury the former was dismissed from the room and the examination of witnesses proceeded with the 23 jurors in command.

Following the ousting of the prosecutor, another test of strength took place on a motion to abandon the investigation. Those supporting this plan were able to muster only six votes, however, to 17 in favor of keeping up the fight.

No play has aroused the discussion, or given more joy to the lovers of real artistry than Jerome K. Jerome's re-

"The Passing," as it is familiarly called, will be presented at the Myers Theatre, Monday, February 20, Ian Robertson, who played the part of the stranger over four hundred times in England, will again enact the part, and will be supported by his entirely English company.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, Feb. 15.—Art collectors and dealers from all parts of the United States and from Canada and Europe are well on their way to bid for the many choice items contained in the Hoe collection, which is to be sold at auction under the direction of the American Art association. The sale began today and will be continued daily until March 3. Over 5,000 items in all are to go under the hammer.

The collection embraces all the artistic property brought together by the late Robert Hoe, the millionaire head of R. Hoe and Company, printing press manufacturers of New York and London, who died in London on Sept. 22, 1909. The sale will probably amount to several million dollars in receipts, and beyond question will be the most important disposal of artistic property ever conducted in the United States.

NEW FASHION PAPER FOR MEN OF PARIS

Endeavor of Editor of Paris Publication To Dress On $2,000 A Year.

(BY UNITED PRESS.)

Paris, France, Feb. 15.—A new fashion paper for men has just made its appearance on the boulevards. It is entitled "Le Mode Masculine." The editor maintains that few Parisians who spend $2,000 a year on clothes, really know how to dress. Men wear full dress morning and afternoon upon the slightest occasion, silk hats with business sack-suits, etc. President Falloux, according to the paper, is the only man in France justified in wearing a full dress suit in the day time. The new paper is not a trade paper, but is intended as a guide for men who have money to spend on clothes but don't know how to select them.

call an extra session of congress if the senate rejects the measure and as the completion of the next congress will be greatly changed, it will make it more problematic than ever whether the republicans or democrats will secure the great credit for the passage of this important legislation.

The great hue and cry that it will impoverish the farmer appears to be founded more on hysteria than anything else. A careful analysis of the situation shows that but few products will be affected adversely while the whole country will benefit materially by the practical step toward free trade between this country and the adjacent territory of Canada.

It will open new markets for American products and this is not viewed with any degree of approval by England itself. It is a step to wipe out the boundary line across which thousands of American citizens are every year moving to make their home under the flag of Great Britain. What it may lead to ultimately is hard to say, but it might be suggested an amalgamation of two countries, Canada and the United States, into a great federation of states reaching from the arctic circle to the Gulf of Mexico.

FOREIGN EMBASSIES.

At last the representatives of the United States government in foreign countries are to have suitable homes. It has taken many years and much persuasion to bring the House of Representatives at Washington around to the point of seeing the wisdom of providing American ambassadors with suitable homes. The main difficulty throughout the long controversy has arisen from a misunderstanding of certain of the facts, and of one in particular. It has always seemed to the opponents of the proposition like an attempt to exalt the personality of the ambassador, to surround him with luxury at the expense of the plain people of his country. Upon similar and no more tenable grounds have high salaries for public officials been opposed by those who honestly believed themselves to be on the side of the common people.

Both of these points were brought to an issue and disputed in the latest proposal to furnish houses for American diplomatic representatives abroad. As Representative Longworth put it on Tuesday, in speaking for the Lowden bill, there are only two ways of broadening the scope of the American diplomatic corps. One is to increase the salaries so as to enable a comparatively poor man to live on a scale equal to that of his colleagues, and the other is to provide him a suitable house in which to live.

The Lowden bill, which passed the House by a good round majority, winning to its side no fewer than thirty-six democratic votes, provides that the secretary of state shall proceed to purchase or erect suitable buildings for the use of American diplomatic representatives, not more than $500,000 to be expended upon such buildings in any one year. The cost of any one embassy, including site, repairs and furnishings, is not to exceed $150,000.

The senate should pass this measure. It is in the interest of democracy. It could be amended so as to make residence in the embassy mandatory, and so as to make it unlawful for any American diplomatic representative to draw upon his private means for furnishings or display, other than those provided by the nation, the interest of democracy would be still further subserved.

It should be made possible not only for the poorest worthy American to accept an ambassadorship, but to perform its duties and to meet its obligations, socially and otherwise, without impairment of his proper personal dignity and without possible hazard to the reputation of his country. The poor man, under the American form of government, is theoretically entitled to all the privileges that can be extended to the rich. This idea as to houses for ambassadors is a step toward putting the theory into practice, and one that merits popular approval.

The Industrial and Commercial club has its work cut for it and little by little it is taking one matter up after another and having it adjusted to the satisfaction of the business men without any great stir. It is accomplishing a great work that should be supported by all citizens who have their home city's interest at heart.

Washington is having a fine time with the various contests for and against legislation that President Taft and the republican leaders wished passed. The latest move is to "flood" the proposed increase in postal rates for magazines to death. This means an extra session.

McGovern has not really gotten into shape again. He has not burst into print on the Canadian reciprocity measure, the postal bill or the direct election of senators. However he may find his voice soon and begin talking again.

Governor McGovern continues to handle state affairs in a business-like manner and meet with the approval of the radical party leaders. He may, however, show them a trick or two before he gets through with them.

Congressman Cooper voted for the Canadian reciprocity treaty while others of the Wisconsin delegation opposed it. It would appear as though the solid insurgent Wisconsin delegation was somewhat split.

If the Wisconsin legislature wades through all the measures that are now before it for consideration it will mean that the snow will fly again on this year's crops before they finish.

The spring freshet in February may be a token that spring days are near but it is safe to say there will be plenty more snow and ice before the time for planting the garden really arrives.

There are some people who do not appreciate a rain storm in February, especially when it causes a miniature Niagara in their basement. It is hard to please of the people all the time.

Attorney General Hancock is going to test the civil service law in the courts and if he wins there will be a big scramble for office in many of the departments at Madison.

THE SCHOOL RECORD.

That boy of yours—
Does he bring home reports of school examinations marked "medium" or "poor" and conduct report cards indorsed "bad"?

Or—
Does he just manage to scrape through on his exams, get his regular promotions by the skin of his teeth and escape being suspended for insubordination?

And it worries you.
Which is natural. But—
Doubtless the boy will pull through all right. He may be a fit subject for occasional discipline and he may not be a "shunk" for learning, but don't you worry about him.

Hunt up your old teacher.
Ask him about the boys who went to school with you in the long ago days. He knows their history. And you will be surprised.

There's Theodore Johnson, who always stood head in spelling school—working at day's labor. And William Harris, who never failed on a history date—clerking in a grocery store.
And what of Bill Jones, who flunked so many times? The wealthiest man in the neighborhood. And John Miller, who was adopted as "town bull," but a failure in geography? He is the judge up at the county seat.

What of you?
But the schoolmaster, who has watched the careers of schoolboys for many years, understands that "you cannot tell how far a frog may be able to jump by looking at it." So you can not prophesy how far a boy may go by his school record.

Many brilliant men failed at school.
There may be reasons why your boy flunks. Maybe it is the teacher's fault. He may not know how to go at your boy to get out of him what is in him. Or he may promote him too slowly or too rapidly.

Or it may be your boy is of the kind who develops late.
Anyway—
Don't lose faith in your own flesh and blood.

Do not discourage the boy by finding fault. Do not scold him. Encourage him. Believe in him! Help him! And he will come out all right.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)

By WALT MASON.

The world had whirled me pretty hard, had soaked me out beneath my guard, and put me to the floor; and so, I said to myself, I will quit this world and go home.

SELF DESTRUCTION quit this world and go home. I sought my neighbor, Mr. Wax, and asked him for his battle-axe, to amputate my head. "I am resolved," I sternly cried, "to try my hand at suicide; I might as well be dead." I thought that Wax would throw a fit, and beg me that resolve to quit, and make a pleasing fuss; I thought he'd argue and implore against my threatened deed of gore—but he's a meeky cuss. "You're welcome to my battle-axe," said this wrong-headed Mr. Wax, "and I endorse your scheme; for life is but a train of ill, of debt and doubt and deception, and bliss is but a dream. I would this I were brave like you. 'I'd chop off my own headpiece, too, and shake this tiresome gang; but I'm a spiritless scoundrel. I haven't got the nerve to shoot or drown myself, or hang. So go and end the beastly grind, with peaceful and contented mind, and I, a thing of nerves, will linger in this vale of tears and wish I could suppress my fears, and imitate your curves." I handed back his doggone axe to that base creature, William Wax, and chased myself away; somehow I balked—I don't know why—when he encouraged me to die, and I'm alive today.

Seldom a Cause of Fear.

Men have seen a piece of pie twice as large as they ever got in some restaurants and it never has frightened them a little bit.

NEW LAW PUTS BAN ON HORSE RACING

California Track Owners Will Make No Efforts To Continue Meetings Under Law Prohibiting Betting.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 15.—After having flourished almost without interruption since the early pioneer days the horse racing game in California became a thing of the past today, with the coming into effect of the Walker-Young anti-race track law. The new law absolutely prohibits betting of any description. Flogging by the experience of race tracks in other sections of the country the California track owners will make no effort to conduct meetings with betting eliminated.

GIVES BRAIN TO SCIENCE

Philadelphia, Immune From Effects of Intoxicants, Asks in Will for Study in His Case.

Philadelphia, Feb. 15.—Julius Rosenfeld of this city, a translator and father of Margaret Dale, the actress, is dead, aged seventy-six years. Mr. Rosenfeld in his will directed that his body be cremated and that his brain and stomach be given to the University of Pennsylvania to discover the reason for his immunity from the usual effects of intoxicating drink.

It is stated by physicians that Mr. Rosenfeld could consume almost unlimited quantities of alcoholic liquor without any effect on his brain or nervous system.

B. & O. Passenger Runs Into Open Switch Near Philadelphia, Ill.—Engineer Dies.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 15.—One killed and fifteen injured in a wreck on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Philadelphia, Ill., when a passenger train running from this city to Beardstown, on which many local option delegates were riding, plunged into an open switch. The dead: Engineer Oscar Henneke, Springfield.

The more seriously injured: A. R. Taylor, Virginia; Charles Paul, Virginia; Charles Savage, Virginia; Rev. George Williams, Beardstown; Rev. C. W. Denny, Virginia.

WHIPPING POST MUST GO

Oregon Legislature Passes Bill Abolishing Public Punishment of Wife Beaters Over Governor's Veto.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 15.—The whipping post in Oregon is to be abolished. By a vote of 40 to 14 the lower house of the Oregon legislature repassed the anti-whipping post measure over Governor West's veto. Humanitarian motives are assigned by the members who supported the bill that will relieve wife beaters from corporal punishment in public.

Western Fruit Jobbers in Session.
Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 15.—One of the largest gatherings of fruit growers and shippers ever held in this country began here today when the Western Fruit Jobbers' association opened its annual meeting. Nearly 2,000 men are in attendance and the greatest interest is displayed in the sessions. President John M. Walker of Denver is presiding. The local committee has planned much entertainment for the fruit men.

MONK STARVING AT ALTAR

Russian Vows to End Life by Fasting as Protest Against Holy Synod.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—The members of the orthodox Greek church throughout the empire are strangely excited over a conflict between the holy synod and an eccentric monk, Father Ilodoro of Taurbin.

Father Ilodoro gained notoriety by launching ultraconservative views, criticizing his superiors and reviling the administration. The holy synod thereupon ordered him to retire to a monastery in the diocese of Tula. The monk refused to go and solemnly took an oath before the altar to starve to death rather than quit Taurbin. He already has remained on the steps of the altar five days and nights, fasting and praying in the presence of a huge fasting congregation, which joins in his prayer. Many of his hearers have become religiously demoted.

Attempt to Enforce Sanitary Measures Results in Fight Between Russian Troops and Chinese.

Vladivostok, Feb. 15.—The effort to enforce sanitary regulations against the plague resulted in a fight between Russian soldiers and Chinese residents, in which six persons were killed and twenty wounded. Hostilities began when the soldiers attempted to expel the Chinese from the district.

LUMBER BARONS TO BE ASSAILED

Department of Justice Is Preparing Suit.

GRIP OF FORESTS TIGHTEN

Report of Corporation Commissioner, Sent to Congress, Gives Sharp Warning of Progress Toward a Monopoly.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Two sharp blows at the so-called lumber trust were struck by the administration.

One was a statement from the department of justice that suit is to be filed against the combine based on complaints of discrimination, blacklisting, price raising and appointment of territory.

The other was a report by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, showing the enormous extent of the holdings of the timber interests, giving warning of a monopoly at no distant date, relating the steady increase in prices and predicting still greater advances by those who are engaged in cornering the forest resources of the country for speculative purposes. This report was sent to congress by President Taft.

Some of the features of the commissioner's findings, after several years of investigation of the industry, are: Concentration of a dominating control of our standing timber in a comparatively few enormous holdings, steadily tending toward a central control of the lumber industry.

Vast speculative purchases and holding of timber land far in advance of any use thereof.

An enormous increase in the value of this diminishing natural resource, with great profits to its owners.

Equally sinister land monopoly. Closely connected railroad dominance.

Is Sensational.

The statement of Mr. Smith is the first installment of a long-awaited report, material for which the commissioner has been getting since the bureau of corporations was established.

The report, which occupies a pamphlet of 38 pages of print, is effectively summarized in the commissioner's letter of transmittal. His conclusion, in a forecast of the future, partakes of the sensational.

"There are many great combinations in other industries," says the commissioner, "whose formation is complete. In the lumber industry, on the other hand, the bureau finds now in the making a combination caused fundamentally by a long-standing public policy. The concentration already existing is sufficiently impressive. Still more impressive are the possibilities for the future.

"In the last 40 years concentration has proceeded that 195 holders, many interrelated, now have practically one-half of the privately owned timber in the investigation area (which contains 80 per cent of the whole).

Grave Possibilities.

"This formidable process of concentration, in timber and in land, certainly involves grave future possibilities of impregnable monopolistic conditions, whose far-reaching consequences to society it is now difficult to anticipate fully or to overestimate."

The underlying facts are of tremendous significance to the public welfare. They are primarily the results of our public land policy, long continued. The laws that represent that policy are still largely operative. The past history and present status of our standing timber drove home upon us the imperative necessity of revising our public policy for the future management of all our remaining natural resources.

Only forty years ago at least three-fourths of the timber now standing was (it is estimated) publicly owned. Now about four-fifths of it is privately owned.

Supply for Only 55 Years Left.

There is now left in continental United States about 2,500,000,000 board feet of privately owned standing timber, of which 1,747,000,000,000 is in the "investigation" covered in great detail by the bureau. This area includes the Pacific Northwest, the southern pine region and the lake states, and contains 80 per cent of all the private timber in the country.

In addition, there are about 639,000,000,000 feet in the national forests and about 30,000,000,000 feet on other non-private lands. Thus the total amount of standing timber in continental United States is about 2,500,000,000,000 board feet. The present annual drain upon the supply of saw timber is about 50,000,000,000 feet. At this rate the timber now standing, without allowance for growth or decay, would last only about 55 years.

The present commercial value of the privately owned standing timber in the country, not including the value of the land, is estimated (though such an estimate must be very rough) as at least $6,000,000,000. Ultimately the consuming public will have to pay such prices for lumber as will give this timber a far greater value.

Capture With $15,000 Reward.

Idabel, Okla., Feb. 15.—Detective Brown of Los Angeles identified as one of the men wanted in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times, David Caplan, a prisoner in the local jail. The capture is said to carry a reward of $15,000.

Well Qualified.

"A man who has lived for 20 years in the same boarding house is going to enter your service."

"What sort of specialty will he do?"

KANSAS SOLONS HIT

GOVERNOR'S SECRETARY SAYS HE WAS APPROACHED.

David Leahy, Questioned in Senate, Backs Up Assertion That "Crookedness Is Rampant."

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 15.—David Leahy, private secretary of Governor Stubbs, appeared before the bar of the senate to explain an article said to have been written by him and published in a Wichita paper.

The objectionable section of Leahy's article follows:

"Political crookedness is rampant. I know of one man who was boldly approached a few days ago to falsify a legislative record in the interest of a public utility graft, and I have it at first hand that a man was three times, at least, offered a bribe to juggle with sacred legislative documents. The during of political crooks is more reckless than it was in the palmy days of long ago."

Leahy was questioned by Senator Price, who asked the name of the man who approached an employee.

"Doctor Moore of Pittsburg, Kan., approached me," was the answer.

"Were you in a position to falsify a record?" he was asked.

"No," he asked me to approach another man to do it; the journal clerk of the house," replied Leahy. "It was a waterworks proposition in Pittsburg."

Mr. Leahy said he sent for the journal clerk and told him of the offer in order to put him on his guard. Other questions and answers were:

Q.—Have you any information that any of the senators are unfaithful or corrupt?

A.—Yes, unfaithful, but not corrupt.

SEA IS ENGULFING A TOWN

Hotel, Schoolhouse, Jewelry Store and Several Cottages Are Swept Away by Waters.

Hogium, Wash., Feb. 15.—The town of Hogium is being washed away by the sea and the residents are helpless and panic-stricken.

The summer hotel, containing 325 rooms, one-half of which was washed into the sea Monday, probably will have to be abandoned, as a large part of the remaining wing is hanging over the water and may fall with high tide.

The sea wall has collapsed and the ocean has cut away more than 100 feet of the land behind the wall and is taking long strips five or ten feet wide at every tide. Forward Brothers' jewelry store and the public school building, together with several cottages, have been swept away.

Dictionary's Defect.

The occupant of the fourth-floor flat was looking through the pages of the dictionary the agent was trying to sell him. "No," he said, closing the book and handing it back, "I don't want it. It's 20 years behind the times. It defines 'janitor' as the 'caretaker' of a building. He's the caretaker!"

Evils of Eating Alone.

Bachelors are declared to be more liable to indigestion than married men. One reason suggested is that bachelors so often eat alone. Good company and cheerful conversation aid digestion.

CATARHIAL ASTHMA.

One Bottle of De-rui-nu.

MR. F. L. BOULLION.
MIL. E. L. BOULLION, 208 HINTS
ST., Little Rock, Ark., writes:

"I have been a sufferer with the asthma for about four years, and I tried different kinds of medicines and could not find any relief for it."

"I tried your medicine, bought a bottle of Peruna, and after taking about half of it I must say that I have not the asthma since. Before I took the medicine I did not know what it was to go to bed without having the asthma."

Systemic Catarrh.

Mr. Samuel Burton, 701 Springfield Ave., Summit, N. J., writes:

"In the fall of 1909 I had repeated attacks of cold, which developed into systemic catarrh."

"It left me very weak and all run down. When I got up in the morning it would take about an hour to get my head and throat clear."

"It also left me with a very weak, all-gone, empty feeling in my stomach, which I thought was dyspepsia, for which I tried different remedies with very little improvement."

"I finally decided to give Peruna a trial. I felt benefited with the first dose. After taking three bottles I was entirely cured. I cannot speak in too high terms of your wonderful discovery, Peruna."

Peruna is manufactured by the F. J. Rogers Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Weak and All Run Down.

5,000 DRYSHOUT FOR COUNTY OPTION

Gather at Springfield to Strike at Saloon.

SEE THEIR BILL OFFERED

Governor Stubbs and Congressman Hobson Fall to Appear, But Judge Blair, Terror of Vote Sellers, Speaks.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 15.—A "dry" army of 5,000 delegates marched on Springfield and opened the battle against old King Alcohol and for county option.

In the shadow of the state house the anti-saloon forces marched and counter-marched to the tunes of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," while in the house chamber Representative George H. Wilson of Quincy introduced the county option bill.

After exhibiting their strength in the street parades, they massed in the state arsenal, where the decorations of the Taft banquet were still in place. At two meetings they packed the great building with the greatest throngs it has held since 1901 and the time of the Republican and the Democratic conventions.

Lawmakers in Audience.

The state house was almost deserted. Lawmakers in droves went across the way to hear the speeches and see the display. The noise of the bands and the shouts of the delegates were so loud that it was hard to keep the mind on legislative affairs, anyhow.

George W. English of Vienna, head of the "dry" faction among the house Democrats, made the sensational speech of the day. In an address depicting the hardships confronting new members from the rural districts he dwelt on the scandals of the last session and said that the present legislature was a great improvement because it contains a higher percentage of praying men.

Blair Scores Danville.

A. G. Blair, the judge of Adams county, Ill., who made the recent cleanup of purchased voters, furnished the other sensation. He said that the Danville ballot market could be put out of business as easily as was that of Adams county if politics did not enter into the situation.

Governor W. B. Stubbbs of Kansas and Congressman Richard Hobson were unable to attend, but in their places the delegates listened to speeches from John B. Lennon of Bloomington, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, who presided; W. W. Bennett of Rockford, who served as secretary; and Attorney General Jackson of Kansas, congressman-elect from that state.

Resolutions As Adopted.

The resolutions, as adopted by the convention, show that the anti-liquor forces will be satisfied with nothing less than a complete victory. They were as follows:

Resolved, That we urge upon the people of the state of Illinois in every county and precinct that, from this time until this bill is placed upon the statute books, and to the end that it may be so placed upon the statute books by all fair and honest means, we urge that all the churches and all the local option organizations of the state, by public meeting, private conversation and solicitation, urge upon their senator and representatives that they give this measure the hearty support of their vote and influence.

LITERATURE WAS TOPIC DISCUSSED

AT REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF TWILIGHT CLUB AT Y. M. C. A. LAST EVENING.

3 EXCELLENT ADDRESSES

On Literary Subjects Of General Interest Made Up The Program—President Deland On Tolstol.

Following the regular monthly 6:30 dinner of the Twilight club at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, a very interesting and instructive program was given on the general subject of "Literature." Rev. T. D. Williams, leader for the evening, had secured speakers from the academic walks of life and who were therefore, men who would naturally be familiar with the question under discussion.

"Recent Election to the Hall of Fame" was the subject of Prof. H. C. Inell's comprehensive talk on that unique American institution. He briefly told of the origin of the Hall of Fame and of its connection with the New York university. The method by which the senate of nineteen men, heads of the theological colleges around New York and deans of the colleges of the University, choose the one hundred electors by whose vote electors are made to this distinguished hall, was also explained. The men composing this electorate may be divided in four classes: professors and college presidents, historians and scientists, authors and writers, and judges of the supreme courts, both of nation and state.

The first election was made in 1900 and at that time twenty-nine eminent Americans were chosen to this honor. At the second election in 1905 eleven more were added, and at the recent vote last year eleven others were thus distinguished. Until the election last year the names of statesmen were in the majority, but at the 1910 election seven of the eleven men were authors which thus give this class of men the preponderance in the Hall of Fame. The speaker also mentioned the names of the men honored at the last election and spoke of what European critics consider the tardy recognition of the genius of Edgar Allan Poe.

In closing the speaker brought out the fact that the right of suggesting names to be voted on by the electors, was allowed to anyone and that members of the Twelfth club, if they desired, might send in names of any eminent Americans whom they thought deserved a place in the Hall of Fame.

William Vignani, on the subject of Mark Twain, gave an address bubbling over with appreciation of the excellent humorist, and short readings from his works to illustrate different characteristics were most entertainingly given. "Mark Twain," said the speaker, "is without doubt the greatest American humorist, but he did not work only to amuse. He is not to be regarded as purely a humorist, for there is a trace of true philosophy and a knowledge of life running through his entire works. On Huckleberry Finn alone his record as a philosopher might rest.

"He was a close character reader and at times as violent and strong in his satirical writings. He never descended to the low and vulgar to create a laugh. He had a wonderful command of language and was a master at exquisite word coloring. He could describe some wonderful scene and call forth deep emotions which would stir the soul and then close with some quaint touch that would bring the laugh without destroying the first effect.

"His stories of the Mississippi and the west were probably his best works. He is so homely and American in these that he cannot fail to appeal to those that have a heart in him and his writings. He has a sense of humor and a sense of humor which we are pleased to think is inherently American."

Following several selections by the male quartette, President William C. Deland of Milton college, gave the address of the evening on the topic, "Tolstol," and his place in literature. It was a fine appreciation of the genius of the great Russian writer, and in places dramatic touches added to the impressiveness of his speech. He spoke in brief:

"There are two impressions which come to me from the writings of Count Leo Tolstol. And the first is that he seemed to be a divided man; he was two men in one; he was divided in life in his character in his writings; he was a noble by birth and heritage, and yet a peasant in sympathy. He was a romantic and at the same time was by nature a radical and a reformer of the extreme type. He was a man possessed of strong animal passions and yet entertained pure spiritual ideas. These various things are enough to show the dual nature of the man.

"The transition in the life of Tolstol came in 1882, when he renounced the old life when he wrote his romantic stories, and determined to live according to the literally teachings of Jesus. He took for his code five principles of the man of Nazareth and he tried to play them literally. The five are: do not be angry, justly or unjustly; do not lust; do not swear; resist not evil or any person who attacks you; really love your enemies. He tried to live up to these teachings literally in all places and at all times and there never was a man for whom it was harder to do such a thing, and here Tolstol gained a glorious victory over his nature.

"The second impression from the works of Tolstol is that he makes the reader see the lives of other men as his own life. He makes us realize that we are heroes and cowards, sacrificing and self-indulgent, good and bad, in exactly the same way as other men when we see about us and whom we are so prone to judge while we let our own selves go unscathed. He tries to make us see our own infirmities instead of living in continual blindness. He throws no glamour over vice but he makes it seem very real.

"Tolstol's definition of art is worthy of consideration. He contends in his book 'What is Art?' that the truest and highest art is that which makes men in its appreciation. Melody is good art because everyone can appreciate a tune. Harmony is poor art because only a few can appreciate it. The best novel, Tolstol said, was the story of Joseph because it is a story which can appeal to every one no matter to what class he belongs. In his own opinion, he wrote only one good book, 'Anna Karenina.' The appreciation of the poor is the test of truth, beauty, or goodness."

After President Deland's speech, A. E. Matheson presented an important matter to the club. He stated that he had prepared at the request of the Industrial and Commercial club, a digest of the important bills which had been presented the state legislature, and that any of the citizens interested might receive copies of this by either calling at his office or at the office of the county clerk. The purpose of the synopsis, he stated, was to make the people of this city acquainted with the legislation which was pending, and which vitally affected as an citizen of the state of Wisconsin. He also briefly reviewed some of the more important measures.

MAIL CARRIERS TO HAVE SUNDAY OFF?

Monroe Citizens Will Petition Authorities To Close Their Postoffice One Day In Week

Monroe, Wis., Feb. 15.—An effort is being made by the public here to close the postoffice on Sundays and give the postmen a day of rest. As a local pastor stated, "It is not a revival of a blue law but is simply the attempt to give those who work in the post-office one full day of rest in the week."

In order to further the plan, a meeting of Monroe citizens will be held in the Universalist church at 3:30 Sunday afternoon at which time a number of short addresses on the subject will be delivered by representative business and professional men and residents of this city. At the meeting a petition will be presented and when signed, sent to Washington.

The large majority of the postoffice patrons here can readily dispense with their Sunday mail and instances where mail is important special delivery will insure its delivery.

Valentine Party.
The Seniors of the Green academy training school entertained the Junior class at a Valentine party in the school headquarters, the room being fully decorated in hearts and valentine decorations. Love industries were exchanged and light refreshments figured on the program.

Trains Blocked.
As a result of the high water in the Peconic river near Brownstown, the Dill and Brownstown were blocked, making traffic of trains over the bridge impossible and tying up the service on the Mineral Point division. Passengers leaving here at noon for points west were transferred to the waiting passenger car at Brownstown and vice versa. A large force of bridge carpenters repaired the damage and last evening the trains were able to get through. Considerable water and ice was encountered on the Illinois Central road also, though the overflow was not sufficient to block traffic on that road.

LAST RESORT.
I sought one day to play a trade. They said, "A card must be displayed by such as you; we are afraid." You'll have to get a license."

A hunting then I sought to go. A warden said, "A residing law. By saying, 'Stranger, don't you know You'll have to get a license?'"

I sought to build on my back lot. A distant and sequestered spot. A shed. They said, "Have you forgot You'll have to get a license?"

A wandering dog came home with me. A creature without pedigree. Then a policeman spoke. Quoth he, "You'll have to get a license."

I ventured in a motor car. A sheriff spied me from afar. And cried, "No matter who you are, You'll have to get a license."

So unto poetry I turned. And penned these thoughts that stirred and burned. It is the only thing I've learned. That doesn't need a license!

Seeing the Soul.
As for seeing the soul—that is a common human experience. Lovers have only to look in each other's eyes, they think, to behold the other's soul. The eye is very much more than the iris and the retina and the rest of the optical apparatus. The eye reserves always a guest chamber for the presence of the soul, and when the soul is there it is easy enough to recognize the fact of its occupancy.

A Temperance Prescription.
A British temperance journal recommended a substitute for brandy which could be used in cases of fainting or severe pains. The temperance remedy was composed of equal parts of the strongest tincture of ginger, sal volatile and chloride ether. This mixture contains 83 per cent. of alcohol as compared with brandy, which contains only 50 per cent. of alcohol.

Adjustable Sentiments.
"When citizens acclaim you as their choice for high position what do you do?"

"I abide in a patriotic spirit by the wisdom of the common people," answered Senator Sorghum.

"And when they arise in resentment of something you have said or done?"

"I maintain a superior indifference to the clamor of the thoughtless multitude."

Story of Hans Andersen.
Hans Andersen, the great Danish writer, was an excessively nervous man, and he had a very great fear of being buried alive. So great was this dread that every night when he went to bed he would place by his bedside a large piece of paper, on which was written "I am only apparently dead."

LAST RESORT.
I sought one day to play a trade. They said, "A card must be displayed by such as you; we are afraid." You'll have to get a license."

A hunting then I sought to go. A warden said, "A residing law. By saying, 'Stranger, don't you know You'll have to get a license?'"

I sought to build on my back lot. A distant and sequestered spot. A shed. They said, "Have you forgot You'll have to get a license?"

A wandering dog came home with me. A creature without pedigree. Then a policeman spoke. Quoth he, "You'll have to get a license."

I ventured in a motor car. A sheriff spied me from afar. And cried, "No matter who you are, You'll have to get a license."

So unto poetry I turned. And penned these thoughts that stirred and burned. It is the only thing I've learned. That doesn't need a license!

Seeing the Soul.
As for seeing the soul—that is a common human experience. Lovers have only to look in each other's eyes, they think, to behold the other's soul. The eye is very much more than the iris and the retina and the rest of the optical apparatus. The eye reserves always a guest chamber for the presence of the soul, and when the soul is there it is easy enough to recognize the fact of its occupancy.

A Temperance Prescription.
A British temperance journal recommended a substitute for brandy which could be used in cases of fainting or severe pains. The temperance remedy was composed of equal parts of the strongest tincture of ginger, sal volatile and chloride ether. This mixture contains 83 per cent. of alcohol as compared with brandy, which contains only 50 per cent. of alcohol.

Adjustable Sentiments.
"When citizens acclaim you as their choice for high position what do you do?"

"I abide in a patriotic spirit by the wisdom of the common people," answered Senator Sorghum.

"And when they arise in resentment of something you have said or done?"

"I maintain a superior indifference to the clamor of the thoughtless multitude."

Story of Hans Andersen.
Hans Andersen, the great Danish writer, was an excessively nervous man, and he had a very great fear of being buried alive. So great was this dread that every night when he went to bed he would place by his bedside a large piece of paper, on which was written "I am only apparently dead."

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

"I'm through. I'm done with America—with the States. I shall write my resignation at once. Send down another man to take my place."

Redfield's pleadings were of no avail. Cavanagh went directly from the booth to the postoffice, and there, surrounded by jeering and exultant citizens, he pinned his resignation and mailed it. Then, with stern and contemptuous face, he left the place, making no reply to the jeers of his enemies, and, mounting his horse, mechanically rode away out upon the plains, seeking the quiet, open places in order to regain calmness and decision. He did not deliberately ride away from Leo Virginia, but as he entered upon the open country he knew that he was leaving her as he was leaving the forests. He had cut himself off from her as he had cut himself off from the work he loved. His heart was swollen big within his breast. He longed for the return of "the colonel" to the White House. "What manner of ruler is this who is ready to strike down the man whose very name means conservation and who in a few years would have made this body of forest rangers the most effective corps of its kind in the world?" He groaned again, and his throat ached with the fury of his indignation.

"Dismissed for insubordination," the report said. "In what way? Only in making war on greed, in checking graft, in preserving the heritage of the people."

The lash that cut deepest was the open exultation of the very men whose persistent attempt to appropriate public property the chief had helped to thwart. "Redfield will go next. The influence that got the chief will get Hugh. He's too good a man to escape. Then, as Swenson says, the thieves will roll in upon us to slash and burn and corrupt. What a country! What a country!"

As he reached the end of this line of despairing thought he came back to the question of his remaining personal obligations. Wetherford must be cared for, and then—then—there was Virginia waiting for him at this moment. "For her sake, to save her from humiliation, I will help her father to freedom."

This brought him back to the hideous tragedy of the heights, and with that thought the last shred of faith in the sense of justice in the state vanished.

"They will never discover those murderers. They will permit this outrage to pass unpunished, like the others. It will be merely another 'dramatic incident' in the history of the range."

His pony of its own accord turned and by a circuitous route headed at last for the home canyon as if it knew its master's wavering mind. Cavanagh observed what he was doing, but his lax hand did not intervene. Helpless to make the decision himself, he welcomed the intervention of the bounding instinct of his horse. With bent head and brooding face he returned to the silence of the trail and the loneliness of the hills.

CHAPTER XVII.

Cavanagh's last vigil begins.

His solitary ride upward and homeward the ranger searched his heart and found it bitter and disloyal. Love had interfered with duty, and pride had checked and defeated love. His path, no longer clear and definite, led away aimlessly, lost in vague, obscure meanderings. His world had suddenly grown gray. He had no trade, no business, no special skill save in the ways of the mountaineer, and to return to his ancestral home in England at the moment seemed a woeful confession of failure.

It was again dusk as he rode up to his own hitching pole and slipped from the saddle.

Wetherford came out, indicating by his manner that he had recovered his confidence once more. "How did you find things in the valley?" he inquired as they walked away toward the corral.

"Bad," responded the ranger.

"In what way?"

"The chief has been dismissed, and all the rascals are chuckling with glee. I've resigned from the service."

Wetherford was agitated. "What for?"

"I will not serve under any other chief. The best thing for you to do is to go out when I do. I think by keeping on that uniform you can get to the train with me."

"Did you see Liza and my girl?"

"No; I only remained in town a minute. It was too hot for me. I'm done with it. Wetherford, I'm going back to civilization. No more wild west for me." The bitterness of his voice touched the older man's heart, but he considered it merely a mood.

"Don't lose your nerve. Maybe this ends the reign of terror."

"Nothing will end the moral selfishness of this country but the death of the freebooter. That job was done by men who hated the dangerous—hated 'em because they were renal claimants for the range. It's reasonable to attempt to fasten it on men like Nell Ballard. The men who did that piece of work are well known stock owners."

"I reckon that's so."

"Well, now, who's going to convict them? I can't do it. I'm going to pull out as soon as I can put my books in shape, and you'd better go too."

They were standing at the gate of the corral, and the roar of the mountain stream enveloped them in a cloud of sound.

Wetherford spoke slowly: "I hate to lose my girl now that I've seen her, but I guess you're right. And Liza, poor old critter! It's a shame the way I've queer'd her life, and I'd give my right arm to be where I was twelve years ago, but with a price on my head and old age coming on I don't see myself ever getting up to par. It's a losing game for me now."

There was resignation as well as despair in his voice, and Cavanagh felt it, but he said: "There's one other question that may come up for decision. If that Burke died of smallpox you may possibly take it."

"I've figured on that, but I will take a day or two to show on me. I don't feel any nemo in my bones yet. If I do come down you keep away from me. You've got to live and take care of Virginia."

"She should never have returned to this accursed country," Cavanagh harshly replied, starting back toward the cabin.

The constable, smoking his pipe beside the fireplace, did not present an anxious face. On the contrary, he seemed plumply content as he replied to the ranger's greeting. He represented very well the type of officer which these disorderly communities produce. Brave and tireless when working along the line of his prejudices, he could be most laxly inefficient when his duties cut across his own or his neighbor's interests. Being a cattleman by training, he was glad of the red herring which the Texas officer had trailed across the line of his pursuit.

This attitude still further inflamed Cavanagh's indignant hate of the country. The theory which the deputy developed was transparent folly. "It was just a case of plain robbery," he argued, "one of them dinges and money, and Nell Ballard and that man Edwards just naturally followed him and killed the whole bunch and scooted. That's my guess."

An hour later the sound of a horse's hoofs on the bridge gave warning of a visitor, and as Cavanagh went to the door Gregg rode up, seeking particulars as to the death of the herder and the whereabouts of the sheep.

The ranger was not in a mood to invite the sheepman in, and, besides, he perceived the danger to which Wetherford was exposed; therefore his answers were short. Gregg, on his part, did not appear anxious to enter.

"What happened to that old hobo I sent up?" he asked.

Cavanagh briefly retold his story, and at the end of it Gregg granted, "You say you burned the tent and all the bedding?"

"Every thread of it. It wasn't safe to leave it."

"What ailed the man?"

"I don't know, but it looked and smelled like smallpox."

The deputy rose with a spring. "Smallpox! You didn't handle the case?"

Cavanagh did not spare him. "Somebody had to tend a hand. I couldn't see him do that alone, and he had to be buried, so I did the job."

Gregg recalled a step or two, but the deputy stood staring, the implication of all this sinking deep. "Were you wearing the same clothes you're got on?"

"Yes, but I used a slicker while working around the body."

"Good king!" The avowed broke out on the man's face. "You ought to be arrested."

Ross took a step toward him. "I'm at your service."

"Keep off!" shouted the sheriff.

Ross smiled, then became very serious. "I took every precaution, Mr. Deputy. I destroyed everything that could possibly carry the disease. I burned every utensil, including the saddle—everything—but the man's horse and his dog."

The officer caught up his hat and coat and started for the door. "It's me for the open air," said he.

As the men withdrew Ross followed them, and, standing in his door, delivered his final volley. "If this state does not punish those fleas every decent man should emigrate out of it, turning the land over to the wolves, the wildcats and other beasts of prey."

Gregg as he retreated called back: "That's all right, Mr. Ranger, but you'd better keep to the hills for a few weeks. The settlers down below won't enjoy having a man with smallpox chattering around town. They might rope and tie you."

Wetherford came out of his hiding place with a grave face.

"They're right about our staying clear of town," said Cavanagh.

"They'll quarantine us sure."

Wetherford now that the danger of arrest was over was disposed to be grinsly humorous. "There's no great loss without some small gain. I don't think we'll be troubled by any more visitors, not even by sheriffs or doctors. I reckon you and I are in for a couple of months of the quiet life—the kind we read about."

Cavanagh now that he was definitely out of the forest service perceived the weight of every objection which his friends and relatives had made against his going into it. It was a lonely life and must ever be so. It was all very well for a young unmarried man who loved the woods and hills beyond all things else and who could wait for advancement, but it was a bad place for one who desired a wife. The ranger's place was on the trail and in the hills, and to bring a woman into these high solitudes, into these lone reaches of forest and fell, would be cruel. To bring children into them would be criminal.

All the next day, while Wetherford pottered about the cabin or the yard, Cavanagh toiled at his papers, resolved to leave everything in the perfect order which he loved. Whenever he looked round upon his belongings, each and all so redolent of the wilderness, he found them very dear. His chairs, which he had rived out of staves; his guns, his robes, his saddles and his gunnysacks—all meant much to him. "Some of them must go with me," he said, "and when I am settled down in the old home I'll have one room to myself which shall be so completely of the mountain America that when I am within it I can fancy myself back in the camp."

He thought of South Africa as a possibility and put it aside, knowing well that no other place could have the same indelible charm that the Rocky mountains possessed for the reason that he had come to them at his most impressionable age. Then, too, the United States, for all its faults, seemed merely an extension of the English form of government.

Wetherford was also moving in deep thought and at last put his perplexity into a question. "What am I to do? I'm beginning to feel queer. I reckon the chances for my having smallpox are pretty fair. Maybe I'd better drop down to Sulphur and report to the authorities. I've got a day or two before the blossoms will begin to show on me."

Cavanagh studied him closely. "Now, don't get to thinking you've got it. I don't see how you could catch a germ. The high altitude and the winds up there ought to prevent infection. I'm not afraid for myself, but if you're able perhaps we'd better pull out tomorrow."

Later in the day Wetherford expressed deeper dejection. "I don't see anything ahead of me anyhow," he confessed. "If I go back to the 'pen' I'll die of lung trouble, and I don't know how I'm going to earn a living in the city. Maybe the best thing I could do would be to take the pox and go under. I'm afraid of big towns," he continued, "always was, even when I had money. Now that I am old and broke I don't care. No city for me."

Cavanagh's patience gave way. "But, man, you can't stay here! I'm picking up to leave. Your only chance of getting out of the country is to go when I go and in my company." His voice was harsh and keen, and the old man felt its edge, but he made no reply, and this sad silence moved Cavanagh to repentance. The irritability warned him of something deeply clung in his own nature.

Approaching the brooding feline, he spoke gently and sadly. "I'm sorry for you, Wetherford. I sure am, but it's up to you to get clear away so that Lee will never by any possible chance find out that you are alive. She has a romantic notion of you as a representative of the old time west, and it would be a dreadful shock to her if she knew you as you are. It's hard to leave her, I know, now that you've seen her, but that's the main thing to do—the only thing to do."

"Oh, you're right—of course you're right. But I wish I could be of some use to her. I wish I could kind of keep watch over her. I'd be glad enough to play the scullion in her kitchen. But if you're going to take her—"

"But I'm not," protested Ross. "I'm going to leave her right here. I can't take her."

Wetherford looked at him with steady eyes, into which a keen light leaped. "Don't you intend to marry her?"

Ross turned away. "No; I don't. I mean it is impossible."

"Why not? Don't tell me you're already married?" He said this with menacing tone.

"No; I'm not married, but"—He stopped without making his meaning plain. "I'm going to leave the country and"—

Wetherford caught him up. "I reckon I understand what you mean. You consider Liza and me undesirable persons—not just the kind you'd cut out of the herd of your own free will. Well, that's all right. I don't blame you so far as I'm concerned. But you can't get me—consider me a dead one. I'll never bother her nor you."

Cavanagh threw out an impatient hand. "It is impossible," he protested. "It's better for her and better for me that I should do so. I'm going back to my own people."

Wetherford was thoroughly roused now. Some part of his old time fire seemed to return to him. He rose from his chair and approached the ranger firmly. "I've seen you act like a man."

Ross Cavanaugh. "You've been a hard partner these last few days—a son couldn't have treated me better—and I hate to think of you. But my girl loves you—I could see that. I could see her love to you."

Ross said slowly: "It will be hard for you to understand when I tell you that I care a great deal for your daughter, but a man like me—an Englishman—cannot marry, or he ought not to marry—for himself alone. There are so many others to consider—his friends, his sisters—"

Wetherford dropped his hand. "I see." His tone was despairing. "When I was young we married the girls we loved in defiance of everything. But you are not that kind. You may be right. I'm nothing but a debilitated old companioner branded by the state—a man who threw away his chance—but I can tell you straight I've learned that nothing but the love of a woman counts."

In the meantime Lee Virginia waited with increasing impatience for Ross Cavanaugh's return, expecting each noon to see him appear at the door. But when three days passed without word or sign from him her uneasiness deepened into alarm. The whole town was profoundly excited over the murder, that she knew, and she began to fear that some of the ranger's enemies had worked their evil will upon him.

With this vague fear in her heart, she went forth into the street to inquire. One of the first men who met was Sifton, who was sitting, as usual, outside the livery barn door, smiling, indifferent, content. Of him she asked, "Have you seen Mr. Cavanaugh?"

VARIATION OF ANIMALS.

Now that during a period of years Luther Burbank has made Santa Rosa, Cal., famous by reason of the success of his experiments in producing new varieties of fruits, flowers and plants the question has become a practical one why new varieties of animals may not also be obtained.

It is an obvious fact that many well known varieties of animals are nothing but crosses of other varieties. Thus from time immemorial the mule has been a most serviceable though sterile descendant of the ass and the horse. Different breeds of horses have been bred and perpetuated combining the good qualities of their two lines of descent and yet differing from each of them.

There is an almost infinite diversification of the dog race, no other species of animals probably showing such contrasts in size, form, color and disposition, so that it is difficult to think of them all as really belonging to a single species. The same work has been done with cattle, so that we have the Holsteins, the Alerneys, the Jerseys, etc. The crossing of cattle and buffaloes has also been accomplished, producing specimens that are half cow and half buffalo, one-fourth of one and three-fourths of the other and one-eighth of one and seven-eighths of the other.

Not so startling, therefore, is the announcement just made that Dr. William Ernest Castle of Harvard university has achieved some remarkable results in this line, among which are a race of guinea pigs showing four instead of three toes on the hind foot, an entirely new cinnamon color for guinea pigs, a silver guinea pig, new to science, and two kinds of rats from the same ancestors.

DAILY DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN

DIET FUNDAMENTAL TO HEALTH.

The suggestions given in these hints are the results of more than ten years original investigation, especially into the relation of diet and health, and many years experience as a physician, prescribing chiefly diet with other natural means of cure. These methods have proved successful in many difficult cases in which the ordinary remedies have failed. Whatever means of preserving or restoring health may be employed, diet is fundamental, and as it is so constant in its influence its essential principles should be understood by all. Many readers of these hints have reported great improvement by following the suggestions. It is always to be borne in mind that changes should be made gradually, especially by one past middle life, and one should not be discouraged if the first effects seem to be injurious rather than beneficial. There can be no doubt that in every case the reduction of the number of articles of food eaten at a meal is beneficial, provided that the essential elements of nutrition are obtained as nearly as possible in the proportion in which they exist in the body. Whole wheat bread, when it can be obtained, with butter, is a complete food in itself.

Millions of Lives

An Awful Toll Collected by Consumption. Many Unnecessary Deaths.

If people could only understand that systematic catarrh is an internal disease that external applications cannot cure, they would not need to be warned so often about this deadly, which, when neglected, paves the way often-times for consumption, at the cost of millions of lives every year. Yet catarrh may be cured, if the right treatment is employed.

The only way to successfully treat catarrh is by employing a medicine which is absorbed and carried by the blood to all parts of the system, so that the mucous membrane or internal lining of the body is toned up and made capable of resisting the infection of consumption and other diseases.

We have a remedy prepared from the prescription of a physician who for thirty years studied and made catarrh a specialty, and whose record was a patient restored to health in every case where his treatment was followed as prescribed. That remedy is Rexall Muc-Tone. We are so positive that it will completely overcome catarrh in all its various forms, whether acute or chronic, that we promise to return every penny paid us for the medicine in every case where it fails or for any reason does not satisfy the user.

We want you to try Rexall Muc-Tone on our recommendation and guarantee. We are right here where you live, and you do not contract any obligation or risk when you try Rexall Muc-Tone on our guarantee. We have Rexall Muc-Tone in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Very often the taking of one 50-cent bottle is sufficient to make a marked impression upon the case. Of course in chronic cases a longer treatment is necessary. The average inward catarrh is cured in $1.00 bottles. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Jamestown only at our store—The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co.
